EL CARMELO TEAM AGAIN VICTORIOUS

Once more the drill team of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, has demonstrated its superiority over the other teams of the state, having been awarded first prize at the Admission Day celebration at Santa Cruz last Monday. And the residents of Daly City and Colma are indeed proud of such a splendid, well-trained team of young women.

From the beginning to the end of the long line of march, the young women who represented El Carmelo Parlor won the applause of the vast throng of spectators who had gathered to witness the parade. From the beginning of the parade it was quite evident that the drill team from El Carmelo Parlor had caught the eye of the crowd.

The efficiency in which they executed their maneuvers, and their neatness in appearance, helped them to win the first prize, and the applause of the multitude. Much praise was given to Miss Audrey Diamond, who was the youngest drill major of Califorina participating in the Admission Day celebration, and who has only taken over the duties during the past few months; also Mr. Fred Collins, who has coached the drill team on Friday nights.

After the parade the drill team and Mr. Collins were the guests of Judge Fletcher Cutler, of Burlingame, Past Grand President of the Native Sons, at the Hotel Casa Del Rey.

The members of the victorious El Carmelo Parlor drill team are Audrey Diamond, major; Margie O'Connor, Edna Boyle, Ethel Anderson, Evelyn Mohr, Sylvia Fischer, Nora Healey, Louise Clemens, Edith Taylor, Lorraine Wall, Elsie Fahy, Pauline Gregoire, Alice Santel, Tessie O'Connor, Christine Hume, Halliett Michaelson, Roberta Heagney.

The Admission Day celebration at Santa Cruz last Monday was attended by some two hundred parlors of the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, who were the moving spirit in the celebration.

Covered wagons and automobiles, saddle horses and motorcycles, gray-haired pioneers and colorful youth all took part in the surge of life that swept through the streets. A parade was the first event. It was two miles long and composed of 2,000 persons, numerous floats and took two hours in passing a given point

A striking feature of the parade was the section made up of members of the Covered Wagon Babies Club of California. There were 75 men and women. All were born in covered wagons on the trek across the plains. Many were dressed in the garb of the days of '49 and their passage was marked by a continuous fanfare of cheering, flag waving and congratulations shouted at them by spectators. Heading the line of march were Arthur J. Clue, Oakland, representing the Native Sons, and Evelyn I. Carson representing the Native Daughters, together with H. P. Jeantrout, general chairman of the celebration.

MAN RUN DOWN ON MISSION ROAD

Lee Dean, aged 44, is in the South San Francisco hospital, recovering from injuries sustained Tuesday night when he was struck by an automobile. He was found lying in a pool of blood on Mission road just south of Daly City at midnight. Dean had been run down while walking south, according to Police Chief Jack Doyle. The driver of the machine that hit Dean failed to stop following the accident.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CREATING INTEREST

With the organization of the Young People's Society a new interest was created in the Grace Presbyterian church. The church parlors are being used for this purpose instead of the auditorium. Mr Earl McCune is the new president of the scoiety. The pastor will take for his topic the subject, "The Church, what it is, and what it is not."

TAX RATE FIXED BY CITY COUNCIL

On account of Monday being Admission Day, the regular session of the City Council was held Tuesday evening, with all members answering the roll call and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

The tax rate for the coming year was fixed by the City Council at $1.50 on the $100 assessed valuation, made up as follows:

General purposes	$1.00
Waterworks interest and redemption	.33
Library	.07
Street emergency	.10
Total	$1.50

A communication was received from the Board of Fire Commissioners, recommending that the City Council deny the application for a permit for the installation of a refinery on the property located on Junipero Serra boulevard, adjoining the T. I. Butler gravel bunker. The recommendation was complied with and the application for the permit was denied.

A communication was received from Secretary A. N. Lang of the Board of Fire Commissioners, stating that Company No. 2 has two new members, Ed Goldkuhl, 141 Miriam street, and Frank E. Watson, 96 Parkview avenue.

The question of the correct frontage line on Mission street at the county line came up again and it was mutually agreed between the parties affected and the city to bring the matter to court for settlement. The city attorney was instructed to take the proper steps and file suit.

Bids were received from various contractors for the construction of Company No. 1 fire house and the Veteran Firemen's hall. The bids ranged from $3,750 to $5,180. The low bid was received from A. Milano, who was awarded the contract.

The building on the northeast corner of San Jose avenue and Wilson street has been reported as being in very bad shape and unsanitary. The matter was referred to Chief Doyle and the city attorney with instructions to take steps to have this menace abated.

Complaints have been received that there are a number of stray dogs in this vicinity. This matter was referred to Chief Doyle and the poundmaster.

For the good showing they made at Santa Cruz, and the splendid advertising they gave Daly City, the City Council extended a vote of thanks to the local parlors of the Native Sons and daughters, also the Boy Scouts, and also to the local firemen who participated in the tug of war at the firemen's celebration at San Bruno.

MERCHANTS' NINE LOSES IN TENTH

The Daly City Merchants' nine lost a ten inning 3 to 2 decision to the Margetts twirler last Sunday on the Rolph diamond.

The game was a pitchers' battle throughout. W. Harrington, the winning chucker, allowed only two hits and one run. Bill Clark and D. Randal, the Merchants' slabmen, were touched for seven safeties.

The catching of F. Strand was the bright spot of the day. This young husky from Daly City caught three men napping on first base and retired one runner at second in an attempted steal.

The third inning found both teams scoring. A pair of singles and an error put over a run for the Margetts. F. Strand clouted a triple and Clark sacrificed him along to tie the score for the Merchants.

The victors obtained the lead again in the following frame, when their shortstop doubled and crossed the plate on Retig's error. They held this margin until the ninth inning.

J. Keane tied the score with a freak hit in the ninth. He hit a lazy fly ball behind first base, which the second sacker failed to handle, and it bounced over the fence, allowing Jimmy to complete the circuit unmolested.

Errors by sloan and Keane allowed the winning run to cross the plate in the extra spasm.

The Merchants made 2 hits, 2 runs, and 5 errors; Margetts, 3 runs, 7 hits and 4 errors.

Entertains Members of Club

Mrs. H. Sandys, of 109 Santa Cruz avenue, delightfully entertained the members of the St. Vincent Club at her home on Thursday evening of last week. After an evening of games and music, dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Miss Pauline Wolfe, Miss Elenore Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Riley and baby sons, Miss Josephine Urioechea, Miss Josephine Muller and Miss Susie Pallo.

FAVOR REMOVAL OF THE BILLBOARD

The first definite steps to abolish the billboard menace in San Francisco was taken last Tuesday. In a resolution forwarded to the board of supervisors, the City Planning Commission by unanimous vote requested the removal of all such signs along the Great Highway. It also asked an ordinance forbidding the construction of signs along the city's boulevards.

This resolution is regared as the first acutal move on the part of city officials to comply with the repeated demand of various civic organizations and citizens' civic groups that action be taken to prevent the marring the beauty of San Francisco's new boulevards.

The resolution was introduced by Mrs. Parker Maddux. Members of the commission declared they would continue the warfare on the unsightly billboards until all boulevards were free of them.

THE EAGLES NEST

The regular weekly meeting of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, was held on Thursday evening, and a good crowd was in attendance. A minute of silence was held, out of respect for the recent demise of Brothers Campani and Fazzia. Broothers Blecher, Shapiro, Melona and Dugan were reported on the sick list.

The booster committee reported an initiation to be held on October 24, and a Hallowe'en party for October 31. These two affairs are to be the beginning of the fall campaign of activity. The order is out for 500 members by Christmas, and from present indications the desire will be fulfilled.

The first meeting of the Associated Aeries of San Mateo county will be held in South San Francisco on September 17, next Tuesday. Let Daly City make it a banner beginning by turning out in large numbers. The committee wants at least fifty to go. Tell Worthy President Heim you are a booster and intend to go to South San Francisco. Every merchant of Daly City should be represented. Redwood City City so far has outnumbered Daly City in the number of members interested in this work. Let us prove that the spirit of Colma-Vista Grande is still alive and we are behind the officers 100 per cent.

The old age pension committee has asked us to announce that if there is any one in Daly City or Colma eligible for the state pension they may obtain blanks for application from Larry Shaw or Officer Heim. This law goes into effect on January 1, 1930, so if any one desires to take advantage of same, they must make application as soon as possible, so as not to lose any time or pension.

Why were so many business men missing at the last meeting? Suppose they were all at Pebble Beach.

"QUEEN OF DALY CITY" WILL MAKE VOYAGE

Skipper Peter Pavlos announces that he plans to launch the cruiser "Queen of Daly City," next Monday, on her maiden voyage. Duke Cruchoff and Bill Strand will be the other officers on deck when this trio make an excurison to California City.

The purpose of this pleasure trip, if you may call it that, is to try the speed of the craft. Captain Pavlos said: "I hope the weather is in our favor, and if this wish is granted, we will probably break a few records." They plan to do a little fishing, if they ever reach their destination.

SEEK PROTECTION FROM FIRE PERIL

Notice was served on the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Tuesday by the Associated Firemen of San Mateo county that grass and brush fires during the summer have grown to be so great a drain upon the fire departments of the incorporated cities of the county that they will soon be unable to aid in subduing fires outside of their own limits.

Chiefs appearing before the board were Edward Wheeler, of San Carlos; Mark Ryan, of Redwood City; Wilkie J. Dessin, of Burlingame; J. A. Macabee, of the Oak Knowl fire district; and County Fire Warden Bert Werder.

Following addresses by representatives of the association and Fire Warden Werder, the supervisors took preliminary steps to form a San Mateo county fire district for 1930 which would have its own personnel and equipment for combating hill and grass fires.

Mr. Ryan declared that "the cities of this county are growing faster than their fire departments. The risks at home are greater than ever, and very soon these cities will be unable to help Fire Warden Werder and his volunteers. Redwood City is an example of this condition. The county is lacking in its own fire organization."

Fire Chief Wheeler warned the board that a disaster similar to Mill Valley's might strike this county at any time. He told of the grass blaze between Belmont and San Carlos two months ago that leaped from unincorporated territory into fire districts and seriously threatened both communities before it was brought under control by hundreds of volunteers.

Fire Warden Werder referred to the number of independent fire districts now existing in unincorporated territory. He said they were unable to render outside aid in time of a crisis. "These districts will not fight a fire until is spreads into their territory," he said, and added that he believed they should be abolished in favor of one county fire district.

"A fire district—I favor one similar to that in existence in Los Angeles county—is the only thing," Werder declared. "When you have such a district you can move large forces of enlisted volunteers and apparatus to the scene of a fire wherever it may be."

"The county should not have relied upon the incorporated cities in the first place," the warden added.

Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey suggested that fines levied against liquor violators in the cities be created into a fund to finance a county fire department. Supervisor Hickey finally moved to refer formation of the county fire area to District Attorney Franklin Swart for an opinion to be given at the next meeting.

CELEBRATES NINTH BIRTHDAY

Kathryn Callen little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Callen of Evergreen avenue, was guest of honor at a party given last Saturday afternoon, at the home of her parents in honor of her ninth birthday anniversary.

The youngsters spent a delightful afternoon playing games after which dainty refreshments were served.

The table was prettily decorated in yellow with little candy baskets to match. A huge birthday cake with nine candles occupied the center of the table and greatly pleased the children.

The guests were Margaret Ann, Julia and Henry Steele, Lawrence Dorothea and Milton Peterson, Violet Bullo, Evelyn Swyner, Angelina Continola, Betty and Phylis Winn, Dorothy Manseau, Joan Tway, Dorothy Lewis, and Meta, Kathryn, Elizabeth, and Jimmie Callen, and Betty Coen.

ADMISSION DAY AT SANTA CRUZ

Daly City was well represented at Santa Cruz on Admission day, so were many other enterprising communities of the Golden State. As a result, the Native Sons' and Daughters' parade was one of the grandest that people of Santa Cruz ever saw.

Too much credit can not be given to the committee of arrangement and reception of the city by the sea, as the buildings and streets were grandly decorated and every visitor was made to feel that the welcome was royal. The civil authorities were sensibly liberal and a reasonable freedom was permitted and enjoyed.

In every parade there is a praiseworthy ambition, in every unit, exciting the hope of winning, by merit, some recognition of earnest effort.

The drum corps of El Carmelo Parlor No. 256, N. S. G. W., were determined to make the best showing possible. Under the leadership of Ernest Micco, every spare moment was used, for weeks, to drill so that the best could be presented at the parade.

On the eventful day the drum corps did so well that it was awarded a trophy in the form of a magnificent cup. This afforded so much elation that every resident of Daly City who was present rejoiced with the Native Sons.

It is said that the drumming, marching and evolutions of the drum corps were perfect, but eighteen points were lost on account of the performers' not having the proper uniforms for the occasion. Possibly this defect will be overcome by the generosity of good friends in the near future.

The success of the Native Sons of Daly City and Colma is equalled only by the Native Daughters of the same places. Their drill team, looking so delicately beautiful in their spotless costumes that everyone seeing them could not help but praise, won a recognition too, for their faultless drilling during the parade.

The triumph they won was the result of persistent effort and practice for many weeks and they deserve the highest compliment from both their membership and the general public.

In conclusion, let us all give credit to the Native Sons and the Native Daughters for the fame they have brought to Daly City and Colma.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

Red Cross workers from up and down the coast began a five day session in San Francisco on Tuesday. Methods of "carrying on" during peace time, and various organization problems were discussed by the convention.

Negotiations are now under way for the transfer of the historic plaza at Sonoma to the state of California as a public park. It was in this plaza that the Bear Flag of the Republic of California was raised on June 4, 1846, to be replaced shortly after by the American Flag.

Victim of a "petting party" bandit, Albert Claussen, aged 21, is in the hospital in Stockton with a bullet in his groin. He was shot by a bandit who accosted him and a girl companion as they were seated in a car parked in a lane.

Hit by an automobile while they were walking along the Crystal Springs road west of San Mateo, last Sunday night, Thomas Donahue, aged 73, Mrs. Margaret Lester and Miss Nellie Lester narrowly escaped death, all three being badly bruised and are now in the hospital.

Joseph Fernandez, of South San Francisco, is in the hospital with a serious knife wound in the abdomen, the result of a battle with Charles Delgrade, who escaped with a slash across his back. Both men are steel workers.

Funeral services were held Tuesday for Edward M. Graney, nationally known sportsman, refree and political figure, who died Sunday in San Francisco after a brief illness. Services were read by Father Oliver Welsh of the Paulist Fathers, a lifelong friend. Civic, police and state officials were numbered among the pallbearers.

Degrees and certificates of completion were presented to 279 students of the University of California last Tuesday, following the summer session.

Climbing into the fire box of a boiler at a contracting plant at San Pedro, Robert Ammonds, aged 45, ended his life after turning on gas jets.

WILL CELEBRATE OPENING OF ROAD

The new $5,000,000 Bayshore boulevard between San Francisco and the northern boundary of South San Francisco will be completed by October 6, at which time it is expected a great celebration will be held in which San Mateo and San Francisco county citizens will take part.

Last Tuesday members of the executive committee of the San Francisco board of supervisors, composed of Supervisor Havenner, Harvey M. Toy, Halsey E. Manwaring, Clyde E. Healy, assistant city engineer of San Francisco, and W. F. Benedict, executive secretary of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, awaited on the San Mateo county board of supervisors to request that a local committee be appointed to assist in arranging the proposed monster celebration.

The San Mateo county board decided to hold a mass meeting next Monday morning, when city officials, chamber of commerce and service clubs of the peninsula will be asked to aid in the promotion of the celebration of the completion of the highway in which residents of both counties are vitally interested.

Engineer Healy, in charge of the construction of the new highway, and Mr. Benedict hailed it as one of the greatest engineering feats in the history of the state. It was undertaken by San Francisco and the State Highway Commission.

As soon as the committees from the two counties can get together, work will begin on the arrangements for the celebration, it being expected that members of the highway commission, civic leaders and citizens from both counties will be present to observe the formal opening of this newly completed boulevard.

BEGIN WORK ON THE GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE

Preliminary work on the $30,000,000 Golden Gate bridge was started last Tuesday. Capt. Charles A. Ellis and Capt. F. A. Savage, engineers, began a survey of the base line between Fort Point and Lime Point. The bridge will pass over a point about 150 feet above the old fort building at Fort Point, and will join the Marin county shore 300 feet west of the Lime Point lighthouse, the survey indicated. The survey is to enable the engineers to prepare maps and other data to guide them in making borings and soundings for the foundation piers. The engineers announced that they expected to have sufficient work done within the next few days to enable the bridge district to advertise for borings by the end of this month. Preliminary tests made last month indicated that bedrock conditions were favorable to the project.

FAILED TO GIVE SIGNAL WHEN MAKING LEFT TURN

Five persons injured Sunday at Lomita Park in an accident caused by failure of a motorist to signal for a left turn are in the South San Francisco hospital. They are Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Martin, San Jose; Gilbert Martin, San Jose; Robert Gee, San Francisco, and Mrs. Hong Yick, Oakland. All suffered cuts and bruises. Mrs. Martin also suffered a fracture of the knee. The accident occurred when a car ahead of the one in which the Chinese were riding turned from El Camino Real. In attempting to avoid it the Yick car is said to have struck the Martin machine.

RAID ON RESORT NETS TRUCK OF ASSORTED BOOZE

A truck load of assorted liquor, moonshine and wines, valued at close to $1000, was confiscated and five men placed under arrest by Chief of Police J. L. Collins and a posse of Redwood City policemen in a raid on a resort on the Woodside road near Five Points early Sunday morning. Doc Kirby, salesman, and C. E. Bueryard, rancher, were taken into custody as owners, and later released on $500 cash bail each. J. Feeley, Jack Jones, and F. R. Walsh, all salesmen, were arrested in the place, and charged with frequenting a bootleg joint.

BOARD POSTPONES COLMA HEARING

Hearing of the request of Colma property owners seeking a resolution to proceed with eminent domain for main sewer rights-of-way in Colma, at present refused by owners of the land sought to be condemned, was laid over for one week when brought before the San Mateo county board of Supervisors last Tuesday. Attorney A. J. Scampini represented the petitioners.

MOTORISTS WARNED TO RENEW LICENSES

With the deadline date for renewal of operators' license cards rapidly approaching, an intensive drive is being started to bring in motorists whose licenses must be renewed. These are all cards issued prior to January, 1927, and it is estimated that there are several hundred thousand such void cards still out.

The announcement of the drive made by Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, further states that state traffic officers and police departments will warn all motorists found operating with cards bearing the old dates. No arrests, however, will be made at present.

While the "deadline date" for the renewal period has not been set, it is expected that announcement will soon be made of the time for closing the period of examination and renewal.

New type licenses will be issued, hereafter, that comply with the new law. These are in the form of a folder fitting into an envelope just large enough to go into an ordinary card case. Each folder bears a number to simplify the keeping of records and will show the date when the license expires, two years from the time it is issued. There are also spaces on the folded license for a record of all court convictions for violations, as provided by the law.

The purpose is to enable a traffic officer at the time of making an arrest, or a court at the time of imposing sentence, to be acquainted with the number of prior convictions of the defendant. It will also keep the operator mindful of his record in these respects and caution him to drive more carefully.

INDIANS EDUCATED IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Indian supervisors have recommended that Indian children be sent to the public schools, where it is possible, in preference to special schools for them, as through association with the white pupils they will more quickly adopt their viewpoint. In accordance with this recommendation, ninety-seven Indian children on the Winnebago and Omaha reservations in Nebraska and those nearby in South Dakota who have heretofore been attending Indian boarding schools maintained by the government, have been transferred to the public schools of the region, according to a statement issued by the Department of the Interior.

This action is based on the theory that is is in the interest of the Indian that he should absorb the white man's viewpoint as rapidly as possible that he may be able the better to prosper in the midst of a civilization dominated by that individual. Attendance at public schools and mixing with white children is believed to lead more rapidly in that direction than attendance of Indian schools and association only with Indian children.

Many of the reservations, except in the Southwest, are located in communities where whites have settled and mixed with the Indians. They offer favorable opportunities to speed up the processes of assimilation which have always formed the background of government policy.

SAFETY TO BE TAUGHT IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

School children are to receive additional protection under the new laws. According to the legal department of the National Automobile Club, all elementary and secondary schools are required to give instruction regarding street hazards and accident prevention. The state officials will, in the near future, compile a manual on public safety, and this will be used as a text.

Since August 14th, motorists are obligated to stop before passing any school bus loading or unloading chilren. However, once stopped the motorist may proceed cautiously at a speed not greater than 10 miles per hour.

But what was this? They had come on a wooden box that streaked down the slope as straight as an arrow from the bow. It was some other scheme of the tyrant Man. Nevertheless, they jostled and jammed to get into it.

The man stood by his water-gun and from its nozzle the gleaming terror leapt. It flew like an arrow from the bow, and wherever he aimed it the hillside seemed to reel and shudder at the shock. Great cataracts of gravel shot out, avalanches of clay toppled over; vast boulders were hurled into the air like heaps of fleecy wool.

The roar deafened the man. He heard the crash of falling rock, but he was so intent on his work he did not hear another man approach. Suddenly he looked up and saw.

He gave a mighty start, then at once he was calm again. This was the meeting he had dreaded, longed for, fought against, desired. Almost savagely, and with a curious blaze in his eyes he redirected the little giant.

He waved his hand to the other man.

"Go away!" he shouted.

Mosher refused to budge. His pig eyes glittered, and he took off his hat to wipe some beads of sweat from the monumental baldness of his forehead. His rich, penetrating voice pierced through the roar of the "giant."

"Here, turn off your water. I want to speak to you. Got a business proposition to make."

Jim was dumb.

"Say, your wife's in town. Been there for the last year. Didn't you know it?"

Jim shook his head. He was particularly interested in his work just then.

"Yes, she's in town—living respectable."

Jim redirected his giant with a savage swish.

"Say, I'm a sort of a philant'ropic guy," went on Mosher, "an' there's nothing I like better than doing the erring wife restitootion act. I think I could induce that little woman of yours to come back to you."

He was sneering now, frankly villainous. Jim gave no sign.

"What d'ye say? This is a likely bit of ground—give me a half share in this ground, an' I'll guarantee to deliver that little piece of goods to you. There's an offer."

Again that smug look of generosity beamed on the man's face. Once more Jim motioned him to go, but Mosher did not heed. He thought the gesture was a refusal. His face grew threatening. "All right, if you won't," he snarled, "look out! I know you love her still. Let me tell you, I own that woman, body and soul, and I'll make life hell for her. I'll torture you through her. Yes, I've got a cinch. You'd better change your mind."

He had stepped back as if to go. Then, whether it was an accident or not no one will ever know—but the little giant swung round till it bore on him.

It lifted him up in the air. It shot him forward like a stone from a catapult. It landed him on the bank fifty feet away with a sickening crash. Then, as he lay, it pounded and battered him out of all semblance of a man.

The waters were having their revenge.

* * * * * * * *

"Berna, we must get married."

"Yes, dearest, whenever you wish."

"Well, tomorrow."

She smiled radiantly; then her face grew very serious.

"What will I wear?" she asked plaintively.

"Wear? Oh, anything. That white dress you've got on—I never saw you looking so sweet. You mind me of a picture I know of Saint Cecilia, the same delicacy of feature, the same pure coloring, the same grace of expression."

"Foolish one!" she chided; but her voice was deliciously tender, and her eyes were love-lit.

She came over to me, and knelt by my chair, putting her arms around me prettily. The pure, sweet face looked up into mine.

"We have been happy here, haven't we, boy?" she asked.

"Exquisitely happy. Yet I have always been afraid."

"Of what, dearest?"

"I don't know. Somehow it seems too good to last."

"Well, tomorrow we'll be married."

"Yes, we should have done that a year ago. It's all been a mistake. It didn't matter at first; nobody noticed, nobody cared. But now it's different. I can see it by the way the wives of the men look at us. Well, we don't care anyway. We'll marry and live our lives. But there are other reasons."

"Yes?"

"Yes. Garry talks of coming out. You wouldn't like him to find us living like this—without benefit of clergy?"

"Not for the world!" she cried, in alarm. "What will he think of me, I wonder, poor, ignorant me? I believe I'm afraid of him. I wish he'd stay away and leave us alone. Yet for your sake, dear, I do wish him to think well of me."

"Don't fear, Berna. He'll be proud of you. But there's a second reason."

"What?"

"Oh, my beloved! perhaps we'll not always be alone as we are now. Perhaps, perhaps some day there will be others—little ones—for their sakes."

She did not speak. I could feel her nestle closer to me. So we sat there in the big, deep chair, in the glow of the open fire, silent, dreaming, and I saw on her lashes the glimmer of a glorious tear.

I kissed away her tears. Foolish tears! I blessed her for them. I held her closer to me. I was wondrous happy. No longer did the shadow of the past hang over us. Even as children forget, were we forgetting.

"Husband, I'm so happy," she sighed.

"Wife, dear, dear wife, I too."

There was no need for words. Our lips met in passionate kisses, but the next moment we started apart. Some one was coming up the garden path—a tall figure of a man. I started as if I had seen a ghost. Could it be?—then I rushed to the door.

There on the porch stood Garry.

CHAPTER XIV

As he stood before me once again it seemed as if the years had rolled away, and we were boys together. It all came back to me, that sunny shore, the white-washed cottages, the old gray house among the birches, the lift of sheep-starred pasture, and above it the glooming dark of the heather hills.

And it was but three years ago. How life had changed! Fortune had come to me, love had come to me. I was no longer a callow, uncouth lad. Yet, alas! I no longer looked futureward with joy; the savor of life was no more sweet. It was another "me" I saw in my mirror that day, a "me" with a face sorely lined, with hair gray-flecked; with eyes sad and bitter. Little wonder Garry, as he stood there, stared at me so sorrowfully.

"How you've changed, lad!" said he at last.

"Have I, Garry? You're just about the same. But by all that's wonderful, what brought you here?"

His teeth flashed in that clever, confident smile.

"The stage. I just arrived a few minutes ago, and hurried here at once. Aren't you glad to see me?"

"Glad? Yes, indeed! I can't tell you how glad. But it's a shock to me your coming so suddenly."

"It was a sudden resolve; I should have wired you. However, I thought I would give you a surprise. How are you, old man?"

"Me—oh, I'm all right, thanks."

"Why, what's the matter with you, lad? You look ten years older. You look older than your big brother now."

"Yes, I daresay. It's the life, it's the land. A hard life and a hard land."

"Why don't you go Out?"

"I don't know, I don't know. I keep on planning to go and then something turns up, and I put it off a little longer. I suppose I ought to go, but I'm fed up with mining interests. I'm making money, you see."

"Not sacrificing your youth and health for that, are you?"

"I don't know, I don't know."

There was a puzzled look in his frank face, and for my part I was strangely ill at ease. With all my joy at his coming, there was a sense of anxiety, even of fear. I had not wanted him to come just then, to see me there. I was not ready for him. I had planned otherwise.

His gaze roved round the room. Suddenly it fell on a piece of embroidery. He started slightly and I saw his eyes narrow, his mouth set. He looked at me again, in an odd, bewildered way. He went on speaking, but there was a queer constraint in his manner.

"I'm going to stay here for a month, and then I want you to come back with me. Come back home and get some of the old color into your cheeks. The country doesn't agree with you but we'll have you all right pretty soon. Oh, we'll have the good old times over again! You'll see, we'll soon put you right."

"It's good of you, Garry, to think so much of me; but I'm afraid, I'm afraid I can't come just yet. I've got so much to do. I've got thirty men working for me. I've just got to stay.'

He sighed.

"Well, if you stay I'll stay, too. I don't like the way you're looking. You're working too hard. Perhaps I can help you."

"All right; I'm afraid you'll find it rather awful, though. But for a time it will interest you."

"I think it will." And again his eyes stared fixedly at that piece of embroidery on its little hoop.

Between the curtains that hung over the bedroom door I could see Berna standing motionless. I wondered if he could see her too. His eyes followed mine. They rested on the curtains and the strong, stern look came into his face. Yet again he banished it with a sunny smile.

"Mother's one regret was that you were not with her when she died. Do you know, old man, I think she was always fonder of you than of me? She missed you dreadfully, and before she died she made me promise I'd always stand by you, and look after you if anything happened.

"Now you must come home. Back there on the countryside we can find you a sweet girl to marry. You will love her, have children and forget all this. Come."

I rose. I could no longer put it off.

"Excuse me one moment," I said. I parted the curtains and entered the bedroom.

She was standing there, white to the lips and trembling. She looked at me piteously.

"I'm afraid," she faltered.

"Be brave, little girl," I whispered, leading her forward. Then I threw aside the curtain.

"Garry," I said, "this is—this is Berna."

There they stood, face to face at last. Long ago I had visioned this meeting, planned for, yet dreaded it, and now with utter suddenness it had come.

The girl had recovered her calm, and I must say she bore herself well. As she gazed at my brother there was a proud, high look in her eyes.

And Garry—his smile had vanished. His face was cold and stern. No doubt he saw in her a creature who was preying on me, an influence for evil, an overwhelming indictment against me of sin and guilt. All this I read in his eyes; then Berna advanced to him with outstretched hand.

"How do you do? I've heard so much about you I feel as if I'd known you long ago."

She was so winning, I could see he was quite taken aback. He took the little white hand and looked down from his splendid height to the sweet eyes that gazed into his. He bowed with icy politeness.

"I feel flattered, I assure you, that my brother should have mentioned me to you."

Here he shot a dark look at me.

"Sit down again, Garry," I said. "Berna and I want to talk to you."

He complied, but with an ill grace. We all three sat down and a grave constraint was upon us. Berna broke the silence.

"You will stay with us for a time, won't you?"

"Well, that all depends—I haven't quite decided yet. I want to take Athol here home with me."

"Home—" There was a pathetic catch in her voice. Her eyes went round the little room that meant "home" to her.

"Yes, that will be nice," she faltered. Then, with a brave effort, she broke into a lively conversation about the North. As she talked an inspiration seemed to come to her. A light beaconed in her eyes. Her face, fine as a cameo, became eager, rapt. As I watched her I thought what a perfect little lady she was; and I felt proud of her.

He was listening carefully, with evident interest. Gradually his look of stern antagonism had given way to one of attention. Yet I could see he was studying her. His intent gaze never moved from her face.

After a little, he rose to go.

"I'll return to the hotel with you," I said.

Berna gave us a pathetically anxious little look. There was a red spot on each cheek and her eyes were bright. I could see she wanted to cry.

"I'll be back in half an hour, dear," I said, while Garry gravely shook hands with her.

We did not speak on the way to his room. When we reached it he switched on the light and turned to me.

"Brother, who's this girl?"

"She's—she's my housekeeper. That's all I can say at present, Garry."

"Married?"

"No."

"Good God!"

"Sit down, Garry; light a cigar. We may as well talk this thing over quietly."

He stared at me. His mouth hardened; his brow contracted.

"Now," I went on, "I want to say this. You remember, Garry, mother used to tell us of our sister who died when she was a baby. How we would have loved her, would we not, Garry? Well, I tell you this—if our sister had grown up she could have been no sweeter, purer, gentler than this girl of mine, this Berna."

He smiled ironically.

"Then," he said, "if she is so wonderful, why, in the name of Heaven, haven't you married her?"

His manner toward her in the early part of the interview had hurt me, had roused in me a certain perversity. I determined to stand by my guns.

"Marriage," said I, "isn't everything; often isn't anything. Love is, and always will be, the great reality. Such a love is ours. There's not ninety-nine in a hundred legally married couples that have formed such a sweet, love-sanctified union as we have. That girl is purest gold, a peach of untold price. There has never been a jar in the harmony of our lives. We love each other absolutely. We trust and believe in each other. We would make any sacrifice for each other."

"Oh, man! man!" he said crushingly, "what's got into you? What nonsense, what clap-trap is this? I'm almost glad mother's dead. It would surely have broken her heart to know that her son was living in sin and shame, living with a—"

"Garry," I broke in, "I'm younger than you, and I respect you; but in the last few years I've grown to see things different from the way we were taught; broader, clearer, saner, somehow. We can't always follow in the narrow path of our forefathers. We must think and act for ourselves in these days. I see no sin and shame in what I'm doing. We love each other—that is our vindication.

"Balderdash!" he cried. "Oh, you anger me! Look here, Athol, I came all this way to see you about this matter. You never told me anything of this girl in your letters. You were ashamed."

"I knew I could never make you understand."

"You might have tried. I'm not so dense in the understanding. No, you would not tell me, and I've had letters, warning letters. It was left to other people to tell me how you drank and gambled and squandered your money; how you were like to a madman. They told me you had settled down to live with one of the creatures, a woman who had made her living in the dance halls, and every one knows no woman ever did that and remained straight. I would not believe it, but now I've come to see for myself, and it's all true, it's all true. Boy, I must save you. I must for the honor of the old name that's never been tarnished. I must make you come home with me."

"No, no," I said, "I'll never leave her."

"It will be all right. We can pay her. It can be arranged. Think of the honor of the old name, lad."

"I shook him off. "Pay!"—I laughed ironically. "Pay" in connection with the name of Berna—again I laughed.

"She's good," I said once again. "Wait a little till you know her. Don't judge her yet. Wait a little."

He saw it was of no use to waste further words on me. He sighed.

"Well, well," he said, "have it your own way. I think she's ruining you. She must be bad, or she wouldn't live with you like that. But have it your own way, boy; I'll wait and see."

Odd Foods Favored in Congo and Elsewhere

Koreans, like many orientals, live mostly on rice. They cook their seaweed in oil and serve it with slices of red peppers. Kimsbee, a kind of sauerkraut, is a favorite Korean dish. To the north, the natives of Kamchatka relish the tongues and the marrow of the bones of reindeer, but the piece-de-resistance is the meat of unborn fawns. From the stomach of the reindeer the natives obtain their greens—half-digested balls of moss. A delectable native dish is reindeer sausage which has been surrounded by dough and dropped in boiling water. On the lower end of the peninsula, where salmon are plentiful, dishes of boiled fish eyes are considered a delicacy.

Perhaps few people live as close to nature as the pygmies of the Belgian Congo. Tender roots are staples, but birds, small game, rodents or caterpillars are not objectionable. A dish of white ants is prized highly by these diminutive people, while a slice of raw elephant meat makes a feast.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

WIND AND WEATHER

"Poor weather," said the Wind. He was not speaking about the weather, but he was speaking to the weather.

The Sun Beams.

The weather had just been saying how weary he became of the way people grumbled about him.

"Yes," the weather said, "I should like to have your pity, for life is often very hard to bear.

"I give people all kinds of different days. I give them what is known as a variety, a mixture of weather!

"I give them dark days and bright days and hot days and cold days.

"Sometimes you come and help me and sometimes it is quite, quite, still.

"Now and again the King of the Clouds does some work, or Nurse Fog has one of her stormy hours for her little charges, the Mist grandchildren.

"The sun beams and shines, but they grumble about him.

"Sometimes he is too hot, or he is glaring in their eyes, or they think he is in the way.

"And when he isn't around, they grumble, too.

"'Oh, if the sun would only shine,' they say.

"But there is just one thing, Wind, that I won't do."

"What is it, Weather?" asked the Wind.

"I am obliging in many ways. I give them all sorts of nice weather, but I am not going back on my friends.

"I have willing helpers in Mr. Sun, the King of the Clouds, and in Prince Sleet and Old Mr. Snow and King Thunder and Queen Lightning, and many others.

"They are willing helpers in assisting me in giving all sorts of weather, and they are my good friends.

"So when they come around I am not going to say that it is a bad time to have them.

"I am going to let them come.

"I am not going to take the hints of the earth people, but I am going to be polite and welcome my friends when they come.

"So if they think their grumbling is going to tell, I can tell them, or maybe you'll take the message to them, that it won't.

"Sometimes, dear Wind, I do get very weary of all the grumbling, but it is not going to make me so weary that I will pay any attention to it.

"I shall go on the way I have been going forever and ever."

"I'll try to tell them that," said Mr. Wind. "I'll see if I can get some of your messages around."

"Please do," said the Weather.

"And now, Mr. Wind, let's have a little fun first. Let's have some races and some breezy times."

The Wind was so pleased at being so welcome.

And the Wind did all sorts of tricks for the Weather.

The Earth people complained, and said:

"What horribly windy weather."

Old Mr. Snow.

But the Wind paid no attention. I don't think he heard them.

And the Weather paid no attention. The Wind was one of his friends!

She Got Both

Little Lucy had been in bed but five minutes, when she called out: "Mamma, I want a drink."

"You must keep still and go to sleep, Lucy. You had a drink before you went to bed."

Ensued a silence of three minutes; then, "Mamma, I want a drink."

"Lucy, if you don't keep still and go to sleep I will come there and spank you."

Silence for four minutes. "Mamma, when you come to spank me, please bring me a drink."

Not Acquainted

Anita had been visiting her Uncle Jerry for two days but so far had failed to warm up to his airedale.

Coming home from town she was skipping along by herself ahead of Uncle Jerry until she saw the dog bounding toward her. Hastily she seized her uncle's hand.

"You're not afraid of good old Pedro, are you?" her uncle asked, to which Anita replied:

"No-o, but he might as well see that we're relations."

She Got Even

Dorothy—Isn't Fido a naughty dog? He drank the kitty's milk.

Mother—Yes, he ought to be punished.

Dorothy—I did punish him. I went right out to his kennel and drank his milk.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

No Appeal From Verdict of Chinese Death Squad

Whatever may be said about China as being backward, at least there is one modern note struck with more than visible insistency in the nation's capital. Nanking has brought the old-time execution squad thoroughly up to date. A familiar sight in ancient China used to be the squad of honor which percolated through the streets with drawn execution sword, meting out summary justice (or unjustice in some cases) upon all who disobeyed the law. Gilbert and Sullivan used to sing about the snickersnee. But this has been put away. The execution squad now carries rifles. It is to be seen in Nanking—seven men and an officer. The leading man, as they wend through the streets in single file, bears a flag upon which is inscribed in Chinese characters a warning to observe the law. There are several such squads on duty 24 hours a day, and its word is life or death to offenders. It supplements the police force, but its action is far more swift and deadly.

The Answer

Lee Shubert, discussing the suppression by the authorities of a French play, "Maya," that he had put on in one of his theaters, said to a Jacksonville reporter:

"The trouble? That question is easily answered. The trouble is that the censorship is too narrow or the play too broad.

"Your question reminds me of the waiter. A guest said to him:

"'Waiter, go to the manager and tell him I want to know why the coffee is so weak today.'

"'I can answer that question sir,' said the waiter, 'without bothering the manager. There's either too much water or not enough coffee in the beverage.'"

Hydro Plants Increase

According to the United States geological survey, the local capacity of water-driven electrical generators of 100 horse power or more in the United States on January 1, 1929, was 13,571,000 horse power, an increase of 10 per cent for the year.—New England Utility News.

AUTO ACCIDENT LEGISLATION

On August 14 a new automobile casualty insurance law went into effect in California, which seems to be an intelligent model for this sort of legislation.

No motorist is compelled to carry insurance, but in case of an accident he must pay all damages and provide future insurance before he can drive again.

This is not compulsory insurance in the Massachusetts sense. It places the expense and responsibility where it belongs—on drivers responsible for serious accidents. The careful driver has nothing to fear.

The increasing toll of deaths and injuries caused by the automobile has made it apparent that steps must be taken to curb the reckless and irresponsible. Unconditional compulsory insurance has been found impractical and an expensive failure. Several states have passed acts similar to the California law.

A fair liability law, coupled with rigid enforcement of adequate driving rules, should do much to prevent accidents and indemnify the injured. Reckless drivers are a menace to the public safety. But legislation which places a burden on the careful and competent is unfair and foredoomed to failure.

A Pasadena official is charged with paying exorbitant prices for soft soap bought for the city. Most politicians make their own.

ZEPPELIN'S NEW RECORD

When the great German dirigible Graf Zepplin landed at Lakehurst, N. J., on the morning of August 29, a new record for circumnavigating the world was made, 21 days, 7 hours and 33 minutes. This beat the fastest previous time more than two days.

This record is in marked contrast with that of Magellan's ships, the first to circle the earth, which took three years, lacking 12 days, from September 20, 1519, until September 8, 1522, starting from and returning to Seville, Spain.

In 1872, Jules Verne's fictitious character, Phineas Fogg, was described as going around the world in 80 days. Seeking to beat this imaginary record, Nellie Bly, a newspeper woman, actually made the trip in 72 days and 6 hours in 1889.

Omitting hours and minutes, other records are as follows: Henry Frederick, 54 days, in 1903; John H. Mears, 35 days, in 1913; Evans and Wells, 28 days, in 1926; Mears and Collver, 23 days, in 1928.

When it is considered that the Graf Zeppelin's actual flying time was only 11 days, 25 hours and 14 minutes, it can readily be seen that with favorable weather conditions a record of two weeks or less is possible.

The next big feat in aviation will be a non-stopflight around the world by airplane, re-fuelling enroute. We may see it accomplished before long, as plans for such a flight are being seriously considered even now.

TWO BILLION DOLLAR ROBBERY

A statistician for a large insurance company recently estimated that Americans lose at least two billion dollars a year through fraudulent investment schemes.

Thousands of our citizens are defrauded of their life savings because they fail to take the simplest precautions necessary to successful investing.

The lure of tremendous returns and glittering prospects is an almost sure "bait" for any otherwise intelligent people. They succumb without resistance to the blandishments of the high-pressure salesmen of questionable stocks.

There is but one safeguard against this—knowledge. Few people understand the ramifications of modern finance. The great body of investors must depend on advice.

In America we have a great number of responsible brokers and investment bankers whose business and pleasure it is to discuss with investors securities listed on exacting stock exchanges in leading financial centers.

Investment keeps the wheels of modern industry in motion. But the inteiligent citizen, investing money outside his own business, buys on the advice of established brokers or bankers.

TOO MANY OFFICERS

In the Army, as in many other departments of the government, there are too many officers, according to Chairman Wood of the House appropriations committee, who points out that there is now one commissioned officer for every ten enlisted men, a top-heavy condition.

Illustrating the excessive number of officers of high rank, he states that while in time of war a major general should command 20,000 men or more, at present four major generals are serving with only 9,000 troops in the Canal Zone.

The question of remedying this situation, even granting that is is as as Mr. Wood states, presents many difficulties. The high ranking officers can only be gotten rid of as they retire or die, and if others are not promoted to take their places there will be stagnation in the line of promotion with consequent dissatisfaction and possible loss of morale.

Even now many junior officers of both Army and Navy are resigning because of better opportunities offered in civil life, particularly to those skilled in aviation and other specialized branches.

The problem is one of many which have arisen as an aftermath of the World war, and it will probably take a good many years to make a proper adjustment, in spite of President Hoover's desire to effect a reduction in expenses for military purposes.

PACKERS ASK NEW DEAL

When in 1920 in order to escape prosecution under the anti- trust laws the big meat packers agreed to get out of the retail meat and grocery business developments of recent months were not foreseen.

Now the larger chain grocery stores, which have sprung up since 1920, have gone into the packing and retail meat business which they are able to do because they were not parties to the agreement with the government. The big packers consider this unfair to them, and have asked the right to do what their competitors are doing. Whether their request will be granted, or whether the chain stores will be forced to give up their packing operations remains to be seen.

The public is greatly interested in the matter, as a free-for-all fight between the packers and the chain stores might be the means of reducing meat and grocery prices. For once the trend of sentiment seems to be toward the packers' side of the argument, judging from press comment on the situation.

SOVIET CHILD WORKERS

More than a million Russian children between the ages of eight and fourteen years are compelled to toil under the most shameless conditions, according to a Communist newspaper of Moscow, quoted in the Literary Digest

While Soviet laws are supposed to prohibit employment of children under fourteen, it is declared that little attempt is made to enorce this provision. Added to the hardship of working twelve hours a day in factories, the Moscow paper declares that these children "are beaten; they are absolutely without protection, and they grow up feeble and ignorant beings."

When such reports are published in Soviet newspapers, it is easy to believe that real conditions are even worse, if posible, tha they are painted.

While the plight of the poorer classes in Russia was terrible during the czarist regime, it appears that it is more horrible under Communism. Thus a potentially great people are apparently doomed to a hideous fate, through their inability to set up a goverment based upon liberty and justice.

HISTORY IN STONE

Carved in enduring limestone, the story of the evolution of printing will be preserved in the ornamentation of the great new newspaper building recently occupied by the Chicago Daily News.

Depicted in bas relief in the trimmings of the massive and beautiful structure are the first rude characters chipped on a soft stone by a harder stone in the hands of a cave man, the first writer. Then there is shown the ancient scribe with his roll of papyrus, followed by the various stages of written language up to the printing press, and then the modern press rolling off its millions of copies, with a linotype man in the background, his fingers twinkling on the keyboard.

Carved on the huge panels are the names of great editors and publishers —Franklin, Dana, Bennett, Greeley, Medill, Bowles, Lawson and others. President A. E. Dickinson of the Indiana Limestone company, a high authority on construction, recently declared this to be one of the finest newspaper buildings in the world, also stating that one single piece of limestone used weighed eight tons.

This splendid building is a lasting monument, not only to Victor F. Lawson, founder of the News, but to the entire newspaper profession, as well as to the prehistoric men whose first crude carvings were the beginnings of recorded speech.

SPEED IS THE THING

Marvelous as was the discovery that sound impulses could be transmitted by telephone and radio, their mere transmission would be of little vaule if they traveled only with the speed of ordinary sound.

To illustrate: If one were in San Francisco and desired to talk to someone in New York, and had a voice loud enough to be heard that distance, it would take nearly four hours for the message to cross the continent—for sound travels only 720 miles an hour.

But, fortunately, electrical and radio impulses travel with the speed of light, which for all practical purposes is instantaneous for terrestrial distances, or about 186,000 miles a second.

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that so far the longest combined telephone and radio conversation ever carried on by a regular toll customer was between San Diego, California, and Stockholm, Sweden, a distance of 8,630 miles. By special arrangement longer distances have been covered.

Many improvements in telephone and radio communication will be made in the future, but there will be no increase in speed. Always the sounds are transmitted with the speed of light, the speediest thing in the universe.

GENERAL KEIFER AT 93

Among the famous old men of 1929 is General J. Warren Keifer, the last surviving major general of the Civil War, living quietly at his home in Springfield, O., at the age of 93, and doubtless looking back with satisfaction on a long and useful life.

General Kiefer was born in 1836, began the practice of law at the age of 22, was a major general at 29, and was wounded in battle four times. He served many terms in Congress and was speaker of the House of Representatives in 1881, the year in which Garfield was assassinated.

In 1898, at the age of 62, he was made a major general again for service in the Spanish-American War. His last term in Congress ended in 1911, but he continued his practice of law and remained president of the Lagonda National Bank of Springfield until his retirement two years ago, after 54 years as the head of that institution.

To few men is it given to experience such a long and distinguished career as that of General Keifer, during whose lifetime science and invention have virtually remade the world in which we live.

It looks as though the Red Menace and the Yellow Peril may try to exterminate each other.

HIS FATAL MISTAKE

This is the story of a prudent man, as told by a Kansas newspaper:

He brushed his teeth twice a day, wore rubbers in wet weather, did his daily dozen, slept with windows open, was careful with his diet, had a medical examination twice a year, never smoked, drank, or indulged in any kind of excesses. He was all set to live to be 100 years old.

WORLD SERIES RIVALS COMPARED ON POINTS

Team Play Essential in Short Series This Fall.

(By E. ALLEN LUTZ.)

Another season is fast drawing to a close with two teams leading their respective rivals in the same league with comparative leads that seems more than likely to carry them safely to the end as winners.

Assuming that the two present leaders will finish at the top a comparison of their strengths, man for man, team for team and manager against manager follows:

In the catching department the Athletics have a big advantage with Cochrane doing the bulk of the catching and Perkins, a veteran of many years, helping out. Either catcher overshadows any the Cubs may use, unless Hartnett gets back in the game and he will not be up to his standard with a full season layoff. Gonzales is the Cubs' hope, with Taylor, late of the Boston Braves, a good substitute.

At first base Grimm is a better fielder than Foxx, but not the hitter. Foxx is "coming," while Grimm is "going back," which gives the Athletics a big edge at first base.

At second base the Cubs have the edge in Hornsby. While Bishop is a better fielder and the best lead-off man in the American league, he is not the hitter that Hornsby is and in a short series Hornsby is at his best.

Third base belongs to the Athletics. Dykes or Hale are better than Beck or McMillan, both in fielding and hitting. McMillan is inclined to get nervous in a tight place, while Beck is woefully weak at the bat.

English at short will outplay and outhit Boley, while Boley has a weak arm which slows up a double play combination.

Simmons in left field has the edge on Stephenson only in hitting in the pinch. Both are good fielders and sure "catchers."

Center field is about a stand-off with Wilson given the shade for his long distance hitting. Both are fast and sure flychasers, and are .300 hitters.

In right field the comparison is rather difficult. Both fielders are the most accurate throwers in their league, hard hitters, with Cuyler the speediest of the two. In a short series the Cubs have the edge.

In the pitching department Grove and Walberg are in a class by themselves. No Cub pitcher can compare with either, both being southpaws. Bush, Root, Malone and Blake are as good as Rommel, Earnshaw, Ehmke and Quinn. Quinn may be the big surprise of the Athletics as may Bush of the Cubs. With two star southpaws the Athletics have an advantage.

In reserve strength the teams average equal. The Cubs have good material for outfield duty, while the Athletics are better fortified on the infield.

The Cubs have a faster infield than the Athletics, as good a fielding outfield, team hitting about equal, with the Athletics superior in the catching and pitching department. The Athletics should win four and lose two mainly through superior pitching and catching. Both teams should finish with a comfortable lead which will give them plenty of time to tune up for the world series to follow. In this respect the pitchers will have plenty of rest.

In the "skull" department the Athletics have the edge with Connie Mack a veteran of many battles and Eddie Collins, his chief lieutenant, a hard man to beat in intelligence. The Cubs have McCarthy who has done noble work with his team during this year, but has never before had a pennant winner or a world series to "fight."

Not Always Wisdom to Insist on Preciseness

The late R. F. Outcault, of Yellow Kid fame, said one day in Flushing:

"Most of our comic-strip artists are short on grammar. It doesn't pay to correct them, though. They get back at you if you do.

"Does it ever pay to correct anybody?

"Once a college president was looking for a teacher of English. He hired a chap finally from New York whose English seemed to be perfect. When the salary and everything had been arranged for, the New Yorker rose to go.

"'Where's my hat?' he said. 'I'm goin' to go now.'

"The college president was shocked at such poor English.

"'Goin' to go!' he moaned.

"The New Yorker smiled.

"'Well, I'll stay the night, if you insist,' he said, 'but I must catch the first train in the morning.'"

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today!

Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form any habit. At last he found it.

Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today, this same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative. It may be obtained from any drugstore

"Just take a tip from me. You may have the best intentions in the world. But everybody gets tied up at times. Nature can't always take care of things without help.

"Our Medical Chief tells me that Nujol isn't a medicine. It contains absolutely nothing in the way of medicine or drugs. It's simply a pure natural substance (perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York), that keeps things functioning at all times as Nature intends them to. Normally. Regularly. It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them), but aids in their removal."

Gotham Is City Of the Missing

More Than 23,000 Persons Disappeared in New York Last Year.

New York.—More than 23,000 persons were sought as missing in New York city last year, according to the annual report of the missing persons bureau of the police department made public recently. This is the highest number of cases reported by the bureau since its inception, according to Inspector Joseph Donovan, temporarily in charge of this phase of the police work.

The figures for the current year, however, point to the establishment of a still higher record for 1929, bureau officials said recently. More than 12,000 persons have been reported missing so far this year, they said.

An analysis of the report shows that of the 23,147 actual cases reported for 1928, 22,420 cases were successfully concluded. This gives the missing persons bureau the excellent record of 97.02 per cent average of success. Inspector Donovan pointed out that the average rate of success in this work usually comes near 99 per cent.

17,050 Are Located.

The recapitulation of all the cases in the report divides them into those originating within New York city and those coming from other cities. On this basis the 1928 report reveals that 17,458 men and women from the five boroughs vanished. The missing persons bureau located 17,050 of these in various parts of the world. The remainder of the 23,000 for last year were handled either as unidentified dead or were reported to the bureau from out of town police departments Of the 844 unidentified persons found dead within the environs of New York last year, 713 were identified.

The missing persons bureau located 4,657 persons who ran away from homes outside of this city. A total of 4,745 out of town cases were turned over to the bureau during the year. This leaves only 88 unaccounted for.

Trailed 200,000 Runaways.

The actual work of the bureau is handled by Capt. John H. Ayers with a staff consisting of 37 men and 6 women detectives. Captain Ayers assumed charge of this work in 1918. Since his induction into office he has handled more than 200,000 runaways.

The totals in the report do not include criminals and fugitives from justice who are being sought by the police department on various charges The persons in whom this bureau is interested are criminally inoffensive. The police interest in them is limited to merely locating them for harassed relatives and finding out why they ran away, Inspector Donovan said.

"Many of the runaways have tried to get away from their poor environment," Inspector Donovan pointed out. "They are in many instances children who have rebelled against a too rigid discipline by their parents or forced to flee overcrowded housing conditions of the poorer sections of the city. In about 60 per cent of the cases they return of their own volition, having found that paddling their own canoe in strange waters was too severe a task.

"The summer months always show a higher number of runaways. The heat probably stirs their wanderlust. In the case of runaway children, the parents are often at fault because they forget that children require a certain amount of liberty."

Pays for Stolen Meal by Cleaning House

Trinidad, Colo.—The fabled thief of story and myth was in evidence here at the home of Mrs. Roger Albo.

When Mrs. Albo returned from a shopping tour she noticed that someone had visited her home. She was more than surprised to find the dishes washed, the floor swept and things in general tidied up.

Making an investigation she found this note:

"Dear lady:

"Ate a little grub as I was broke. I did not touch anything else in the house, but cleaned it up a little as a matter of returning a favor. I thank youse very lots.

"A HUNGRY MAN."

Decided at Last Girl Meant "No"

San Francisco, Calif.—Sam Rocco is a hard man to discourage, but after three trips to jail here he decided that possibly Miss Betty Herman's "no" meant just exactly that.

Rocco, according to police reports, went to an apartment house to visit Miss Herman. He rang her doorbell. Miss Herman apparently didn't want to see him. Sam tried to break in.

Glenn Daft, manager of the house, protested. Sam pulled a gun, according to witnesses, and fired at Daft. He missed. He was still trying to gain entry when police arrived. At the city prison he furnished $500 bail and was released.

Undismayed, he returned to see Miss Herman. She called police. Sam was arrested again and once more furnished bail.

He started for the place a third time. Police, however, succeeded in persuading him that Miss Herman meant "no."

63 Raw Eggs Eaten to Save Railroad Rule

Eland, Wis.—Philip Szutkoski, railroad employee, here, acted "according to Hoyle" by eating 63 raw eggs in 20 minutes to save them from spoiling when they were found cracked and broken in shipment.

Szutkoski explained his act by stating that the railroad book of rules calls upon every employee to exert every influence to protect shipments handled by the carrier.

Castor Oil in Demand

New York city now is consuming more castor oil than at any time in its history—but not as a medicine. Hundreds of tons of castor beans are arriving almost every fortnight in Brooklyn from India and, according to M. C. Brown of the Bush Terminal, they are mainly for conversion into lubricating oil for airplanes. The sudden new demand for castor oil, he says, also has provided additional jobs for many persons in India, where the cultivation of the castor plant is being increased.

VIENNA EASILY LEADS IN THE LOW COST OF DYING

Funerals Less Expensive There Than in Any Other Large City in the World.

Vienna.—To live in Vienna is expensive, especially if one is a foreigner; but to die here is quite another thing. Funerals cost less in this former seat of the Hapsburgs than in any large city of the world.

No funeral costs very much unless something especially elaborate and extraordinary is specifically ordered. Most funerals cost only a little more than $14, and the average for all funerals is only a few cents more than $50.

Vienna is ruled by a Socialist government, which its opponents say knows more about ways and means to keep the population poor than any other city government anywhere. Regardless of finances during an individual's life, however, the city fathers make dying a bit easier for those thoughtful persons who in their last hours worry over the sacrifices which their loved ones will have to make in order to bury them decently. The shadow of no conscienceless undertaker hovers over the bed of a dying Vienese to make his demise yet more painful.

Of each death in Vienna the authorities must be informed immediately; and within six hours after the death the body of the deceased person must be removed from the house to a municipal mortuary. No kind of death watch or wake is allowed in any home.

On the day of the funeral a municipal motor hearse is provided to transfer the body to the cemetery for burial or to the crematorium.

Private undertaking establishments exist, but they are compelled to keep their prices down in order to get any business at all. By far the greater part of the 75 daily burials are handled by the Socialist municipality's establishment at the price of 100 Austrian schillings (less than $15) each. During the last 12 months the municipal motor hearses covered a distance 23 times that between Vienna and New York.

DALY CITY YOUTH RETURNS FROM LONG OCEAN VOYAGE

Lawrence Vireno, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Vireno, of Mission street, returned recently from a three months trip to China, Japan and the Philippine Islands.

Lawrence sailed from Seattle on the S. S. President Jefferson for Japan by way of Aleutian islands. The principal cities he visited that were of most interest were Tokio, Hongkong, Manila, Osaka, Nippon and Smithsu. While in Tokio his visit to Buddha, a sacred shrine of the Japanese, which stands 50 feet high, was of great interest. On its head are 700 snails which form a sort of cap supposed to keep it cool. At one side there is an entrance to the interior. In the walls or sides of the Buddha there are small gods and idols which the people worship.

Another interesting feature was an inland sea in Kobi. The sea is dotted with small islands, on each of which one family lives. They go out and fish in their small boats, but never go on the mainland.

Hongkong was the most beautiful city visited. A very funny sight was to see the barbers out on the street shaving their customers, and the butchers with their meat hung in the sun.

Lawrence relates many other interesting experiences. Many squalls were encountered. Near Manila the ship was caught in a typhoon, which rocked it considerably. Another typhoon just missed the boat by a few miles. Whales and sharks were seen in abundance. The whales always travel in pairs, while the sharks followed the ship in a group.

While on his trip, Lawrence met Calvin Coolidge's nephew and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. Mr. Coolidge had a rare collection of skins and several kinds of animals on board ship.

Upon his return, Lawrence surprised the members of his family with many beautiful gifts gathered while on his vacation.

KENNEDY IS LEADING IN PLAYERS' CONTEST

Lawrence Kennedy, left fielder, is leading the Jefferson All Stars in the contest to determine who is the most valuable player on the team. He has a 750 per cent batting average and has not made a single fielding error.

Charlie Aiello is in second place, with a batting average of 666 per cent and only four errors charged against him in as many games. Three of these boots were made in the last contest when he was bothered with a bloody nose.

The All Stars did not play last week, as they were unable to make arrangements for a good game.

Most people agree that it is better to give than to receive advice.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 3 FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1929 NUMBER 7

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Skillful Approach

Enterprising Vendor: "I say, mum, 'ave you got such a thing as a match you could give me?"

Kind Lady: "I haven't one on the place."

"Well, will you buy a few boxes? I sells 'em, mum."

Policeman (producing notebook): "Wot's your name?"

Motorist: "Aloysius Alstair Cyprianus."

Policeman (putting book away): "Well, don't let me catch you again."

Now is the time to buy your Winter's Coal.

Ignorance is the night of mind, but a night without moon or star.

He Hurt Easily

A lady, soliciting for a charity fund, approached a Scotchman and handed him a card with the inscription: "Charity Fund—Give Till It Hurts."

The Scotchman read it, then, with tears of grief in his eyes, he handed it back to the fair solicitor.

"Lady," he said brokenly, "the verra idea hurts."

Ring us up when you need Building Material.

"Tommy, can you tell me one of the uses of cowhide?"

"Er, yessir, it keeps the cow together."

Bobby, busy with his lessons for next day: "Daddy, how many mills make a cent?"

His Father (a sawmill operator): "Not a damn one, son."

"What are you doing?"

"Reading the want ads."

"But you're looking in the female column."

"Well, ain't my wife a female?"

Lump Coal — For Furnaces — Hand picked.

Sure Thing

The man who toots his own horn has everybody dodging when he appears.

She: "Are you in favor of clubs for women?"

He: "Yes, if kindness has no effect."
